

The Sinclair Group's recent decision to force its stations to broadcast an anti-Kerry propaganda piece this close to a national election is an obvious abuse of the privilege extended to it of using the airwaves free of charge, and a clear violation of its obligation to serve the public interest. While acknowledging that all media coverage will inevitably have some bias, I am disturbed that such a blatantly politically motivated move is being attempted by a company that reaches almost a quarter of the country's population through its stations. I urge the FCC to block this move.
